We are in a strange time that hopefully a year from now will be remembered as “the year of the virus.”

This morning I read an Old Testament passage. In the passage, the people had been captured into slavery and at long last, they were able to return to their country. They had to rebuild the walls of the city to protect themselves, and finally, the wall was complete. They were settled in their towns and they had a time of worship and reading of the book of the Law of Moses. They hadn’t heard it read it for a long time and when they heard the words, they wept. After a time of weeping, the governor, Nehemiah, told them, This day is holy to our Lord. Do not grieve, for the joy of the LORD is your strength. (Nehemiah 8:10)

We aren’t there yet. The wall of protection—the completion of the COVID-19 has not finished its course.
